Blue Of Noon By Georges Blue of Noon ( French: Le Bleu du Ciel) is an erotic novella by Georges Bataille. Although Bataille completed the work in 1935, it was not published until Jean-Jacques Pauvert did so in 1957. (Pauvert previously published the writings of the Marquis de Sade.) Urizen Books published Harry Mathews' English-language translation in 1978.

Synopsis. Set against the backdrop of Europe's slide into Fascism, "Blue of Noon" is one of Bataille's most overtly political works, exploring the ambiguity of sex as a subversive force and synthesising the fetishes of violence, power and death that mesmerized an age. In this classic of twentieth century eroticism, the reader is taken on a dark journey through the psyche of the pre-war French intelligentsia, torn between identification with the victims of history and the glamour of its victors.

12 THE BLUE OF NOON As she looked at me her eyes opened wider. With long dirty hands she stroked my sick head. My forehead was damp from fever. She was crying, with wild en treaty, the way one vomits. She was sobbing so hard her hair was drenched with tears. The scene that preceded this nauseous carnival -

BLUE OF NOON by BATAILLE, Georges: (1979) | Worlds End ...

Georges Bataille ’ s 1935 novel The Blue of Noon is inundated with literal and metaphorical descriptions of corpses, which are used to convey the narrator ’ s self-ravaging tides of fear and desire. Simultaneously, the novel is interjected with strangely removed (despite the narrator ’ s physical proximity) observations of the political events leading up to World War II.

Blue of Noon, Georges Bataille. Against the backdrop of Facist Europe, the novel's narrator hastens despairingly from city to city in a sexual and mental nightmare - his internal collapse mirroring the fighting on the streets. Will he identify with history's victims or be seduced by the glamour of its terrible victors?
